The actual preparation of the demand upon the Servian Government has been attributed to various persons. Count Berchtold, the gentle and pacific Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, was not the author of that fateful document. The ultimatum was really composed by Count Forgach, an assistant to Berchtold in the Ministry, acting under orders from the Emperor himself. To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch. I have read your editorial in Monday's issue of your paper entitled "Impudent Pro-German Socialists."

Unless Senator Reed is greatly misunderatood, his complaint against Mr. Hoover is that he fought the devil with fire. The netuate Mr. Hoover would bring to an end. Food control will end all gambling in food, which helps to explain the bitter opposition to the bill in Congress.

. We have Senator Reed's word for it that he abhors gambling. So also do the Armours and Swifts. The packing house inLLOYD GEORGE'S ANSWER.

Lloyd George's reassuring statement of Saturday as to the submarine campaign was doubly welcome because it came at a time when German poasting had begun to create doubts in America. Reiterated professions of confidence in the ultimate success of this weapon contained in recent declarations by Michaelis, Von Hindenburg and Von Ludendorf were bound to have a depressing effect. Coming on the heels of a pessimistic newspaper article such utterances received more attention than they would otherwise have gained.

There can be no doubt that Germany's persistent whittling away of allied freight tonnage has become a serious matter. Hitherto, at least, the building of ships has not nearly kept pace with the destruction. German faith is pinned upon the reckoning that it will never do so. In the same newspaper editions which carried the Lloyd George speech Gen von Ludendorf was quoted as saying:

The supreme army command expects the submarine warfare to break England's ability to prepare for war by lessening her tonnage. Fulfillment of this wish will come despite

The British Premier, however, pointed out that submarine losses are steadily diminishing while ship building is going on at an unprecedented rate. Great Britain will turn out four times as many new ships this year as she did last; in fact will finish more of them in November and December alone than she built in all of 1916.

Furthermore Lloyd George declared Britain's food supply for the 1917-1918 period had already been secured and that a program of cultivation had been started which would insure food for the next year even if shipping losses increase.

In this no account is taken of American ship building which we hope to begin shortly on a vast scale. Nor is account taken of methods that may completely master the submarine. Lloyd George spoke of conditions as they exist.

The Junkers have stood pat on the submarine campaign because they had to stand pat on it. Once the probability of its failure is admitted they can not retain the confidence of the German people and their power will be shattered. If Lloyd George's statements are fairly accurate, the earliest possible date when England can be made to feel the pinch of hunger is at least two years hence. Before that time America will have a winning army in the field.

THE ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

There came into existence Friday the Army of the Republic-the first army of the United States which was created upon the principle that military service is a duty that every citizen owes to his country.

Every man of military age who registered on June 5 is a soldier in this army. Millions of the 9,600,000 who registered will never be called. Other millions will be exempt from service for one reason or another, as defined by law. But all of them belong to this army, whether rich or poor, whether favored or oppressed by fortune. It is an army without a caste, an American army in the truest sense of the term, and thus a proud distinction attaches to those who are called to the colors.

Secretary Baker said in drawing the first num ber in the simple but solemn ceremony that brought this army into being:

"The young men selected today are honored by the privilege of serving their country." We shall be sorry for those who accept it in any other spirit, for they will have missed one of the highest emotions of human life. They too, no less than the volunteers, are dedicated to noble service in behalf of their country, but n a wider sense even than the volunteers they are the soldiers of democracy. "It is not the duty of the Government to support the people, but the duty of the people to support their Government," said Grover Cleveland. We have been wandering away from that vital truth, and the army of the whole republic summons the American people back to the old trail. It calls them again to discipline and sacrifice. which alone can preserve the rights, the liberties and institutions of a free nation, whether in war or in peace.

The French Chamber of Deputies recently passed an income tax bill after ten years of debate, indicating the presence in Paris of some Gallic Reeds, Gores and La Follettes.

FUTURE OF AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

Since the fall of the Romanoffs and the establishment of popular government in Russia, it has been suggested that the Russians had no further grounds for fighting Austria-Hungary. The people of Russia have no real guarrel with the majority of the people of the dual monarchy. Only one-fourth of the inhabitants of Austria-Hungary speak German. Between one-fifth and one-sixth speak Hungarian or Magyar, which is allied to Russian. And the Magyars, together with the Czechs, Slovaks, Poles, Ruthenians, Croats, Serbs. Bosniaks and Slovenes, who make up the rest of the population, are only subjects of the reigning Hapsburg dynasty through the fact that a German Count, living in a medieval castle in Switzerland, got possession of the territory now known as Austria-Hungary, by seizing it, with his armies of retainers, in the thirteenth cen-

The Czechs, for German ambitions, and entire regiments of yars are only pro-German because they hate the that mean a good profit to the growers. Bohemians.

As long as the Hapsburg Government can com pel the mixed, mutually jealous races and armies it controls to continue fighting, Russia will have no choice but to keep up the struggle. The Austrian-Hungarian peoples have never seen their way to free themselves from the yoke of medievalism. They are victims of the fendal system,

If the allied Governments adhere to their pro gram of freeing the Czech-Slovaks, they can only do so through the defeat of the Hapsburg as well as the Hohenzollern Powers. But what will then keep together the diverse races now controlled through Vienna? Could they form a republican federation that would endure?

GERMANY'S BEST ALLY.

News comes from Geneva that fearing the extensive aerial program of the United States, Ge. many is feverishly speeding up the construction of airplanes.

Why should Germany fear our aerial program? To be sure, it has been suggested, and the suggestion has been generally approved, that the quickest and most effective contribution America can make to the war forces of the allies is a great fleet of airplanes. Experts have stated that a sufficient number of airplanes to dominate the air, attack the German naval and army bases, destroy munition works, and search out submarines might greatly hasten the victorious conclusion of the war.

It is true that, impressed with the force of these statements, the House almost without discussion passed a bill appropriating $640,000,000 for airplanes. The Senate committee promptly reported the bill to the Senate with a favorable rec ommendation. It was met immediately with a storm of objections, particularly directed against the drafting of aviators.

The Germans have an efficient ally in the American Senate. General Debate takes care of their interests. He sees that they have ample time to prepare counter strokes before we are ready for the attack.

We hope that we will have a great fleet of air planes and that it will be a fearful force to the enemy, but we are sure it will not be in the air on time if Senators Reed and La Follette and other able obstructors can help it. So long as they have the voice to object, and the flow of oratory holds out General Debate will be master of the field of legislation in the interest of the Ger-

Within a week three husbands who failed to ef fect a reconciliation with wives from whom they had been separated have tried to murder the women. Two of these wives are not expected to live. And little children are involved in tragedies brought about by the most despicable and inexcusable sort of male selfishness.

These men, having taken vows to love, honor and cherish the women whom they courted, "till death us do part," have made themselves obnoxious and brought about a separation. That was bad enough. But to proceed to treat the wronged woman as a slave and try to force her affection and service at the mouth of a loaded pistol, is a crime deserving no mercy.

A stern example should be made of would-be wife murderers, for the protection of women, who already suffer enough.

COUNTERFEIT POTATOES.

The expected has happened. Counterfeit potatoes are in circulation. They are taking their place with phony greenbacks and paste diamonds and are said to be such a good imitation that it takes an expert to tell the difference between the real and the make-believe.

To make counterfeit potatoes you take one pound of sure-enough potatoes, two and a half quarts of water, one pound of soft summer wheat flour, half a pound of split peas and two ounces of lard. Mix well and mold. This is where skill counts. Anybody can mix them, but it takes an artist to mold them. If they are rounded just right, with every artificial eye where the natural eye ought to be, the average potato eater will take them boiled or fried, mashed or baked and think to his dying day that he has eaten pota-

In one way it doesn't matter. The counterfeit not only looks right and tastes right, but the chefs say it is more nourishing. But it is cheap and it takes the joy out of life to think you have been eating a rare and genuine potato and then find out that it was a blended substitute.

CROPS EXCEED ESTIMATES.

It is peculiar that in this year of need the crop estimates through the many official and usually accurate private channels should agree in what now appears to be a mistake. Threshing reports from Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas are now coming in and they all tell of larger wheat yields than were anticipated. In Kansas it is asserted that should the early reports carry through the threshing season the State wheat crop will be 50 per cent higher than anticipated. A part of this increase is due to more careful handling of the grain. Many extra precautions are being taken to glean fields cleanly and to save all of the wheat

But the big gain is in a greater yield than ex-Governments said: "The civilized world knows pected and through the extra weight. McKAY.—The following verses were writ-ten by a Sergeant (name unknown) 30 years ago: The devil, we're told, in hell was chained. And a thousand years he there years ago: The devil, we're told, in hell was chained, And a thousand years he there remained; He never complained, nor did he groan, But determined to start a hell of his own, Where he could torment the souls of men, Without being chained in a prisen pen. So he asked the Lord if He had on hand Anything left when He made the land. The Lord said: "Yes, I had plenty on hand, But I left it down on the Rio Grande; The fact is, old boy, the stuff is so poor, I don't think you could use it in hell any more." But the devil went down to look at the truck, And said if it came as a gift he was stuck; For, after examining it carefully and well, He concluded the place was too dry for hell. So in order to get it off his hands. The Lord promised the devil to water the lands; For He had some water, or rather some dregs. A regular cathartic that smelled like bad eggs. Hence the deal was closed, and the deed was given, And the Lord went back to His home in heaven; And the devil then said: "I have all that is needed To make a good hell," and hence he succeeded. He began to put thorns on all of the trees, And he mixed the sand with millions of fleas; He scattered tarantulas along all the roads. He lengthened the horns on the toads. Daylight-saving dates back to 1907, when an Englishman, William Willett, published a booklet on "The Waste of Daylight," In 1908 a daylight-saving bill was introduced in the House of Commons, but did not pass. The proposition on which the daylight-saving movement is based is that from May 1 to Oct. 1 clocks should be set forward one hour so as to take advantage of the hour of sunlight at one end of the day instead of using artificial light at the other. On April 16, 1916, the German Federal Council passed a measure ordering all clocks to be set forward one German Federal Council passed a measure ordering all clocks to be set forward one hour. MacBeard's hand opened and Donald took out me envelope.

"Why, my dear sir," said the professor with an embarrassed laugh. "I really had no intention of withholding anything that is legitimately yours, assure you, nor of questioning your good faith. I was a little startled at the moment. Perhaps, as mutual friends of the late Capt. Masterman, we may take care of his interests jointly.'

Beard turned to the physician, and had soon completed the arrangements for the removal of the Then he went to the clerk's desk.

The other members of the club, shocked by the sudden death of Masterman, were talking together in little groups. Donald began to hear the words "perpetual motion" and "James I" again. He felt sick at the death of his old friend in this inhospitable place. The silence gave way to babble, and he walked away in disgust.

He held the envelope in his hand still, and he was about to place it in his pocket when his glance fell upon a sentence of the manuscript within. Donald drew it forth and read:

In the event of your hearing of my sudden death you must not delay a moment, but go to my house at 166 -- street Baltimore. Above all, beware of MacBeard. He is an enemy of the human race. So much I have

Donald thrust the loose sheet into his trousers pocket and replaced the envelope, containing the rest of the manuscript, in the inner pocket of his coat fust as MacReard returned.

He was resolved not to let the professor steal any secrets of Masterman's. His sole purpose was to render homage to the last wishes of his old friend. The Baltimore train was just about to leave. Late that night Lieut. Paget found the captain's house. It proved to be in a little old-fashioned thoroughfare flanked by neat two-story houses. that he had found what he was Each had a tiny back garden surrounded by a high wall. There was about it an atmosphere, if not of mystery, at any rate of the retirement common to such backwaters in the roaring streams

The captain's was the last house in the street. It stood a little farther back than the rest and was turned slightly askew, facing them obliquely. as though it knew itself to be out of place and was watching its neighbors apprehensively over its shoulder.

Doubtless it was a hallucination; it was a place of echoes and hauntings. And it seemed singularly appropriate for old Masterman to have had his lonely residence here, matching his lonely life.

As Donald had anticipated the front door was locked, and the window of the living room was apparently nailed up. He traversed the narrow outh that led to the back of the house. To his surprise, the kitchen window was open.

Then it occurred to him that Masterman had, of course, gone directly home on his return from his last earthly voyage. He swung himself across the window sill and dropped to the kitchen floor He lit a match and found the was.

He must have heard the splasing of the monster as it resumed its journeyings, for he stared an instant, and then, as if curious, he drew nearer to the first of the tanks with the air pipe attachment.

He stood quite still, looking at the thing in the water. Donald wondered whether he had discovered it, and whether he had perceived the eyes.

He knew with a yell MacBeard started backward. He stumbled against one of the palms and sent it crashing to the floor.

MacBeard, who had fallen with it, picked himself up and ran in terror. Donald heard his footsteps pattering along the flags outside. He heard the slam of the creaking gate. He knew that the professor, happened and how much was the result of the scope motor, the balancing tanks below, alkali air having obtained the document, was not likely to return. And he had almost done the same thing himself. No doubt, MacBeard had really learned Master the swimming room gradually grew still. The light from the gas-jet fell upon the water tanks. Donald had a queer illusion. He thought he saw the very misty outlines the body of a beautiful woman, the merest shad-

he perceived very clearly a cloudy form beginning to take shape within the nearer tank. The outlines grew clearer momentarily. He saw be the body of a hairless monkey, Opera in Municipal Theater, Forest Park, Musical and Social Event of This Week-Engagements of Miss Anna Wright Benoist and Miss Jane Taylor Announced-West and Virginia Watering Places Calling St. Louisans.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

OMORROW evening, I'Pagliacci will be given in the Municipal The ster in Forest Park. It will be a musical and social event of rare interest. Grand Opera in midsummer is a novelty, indeed.

There are so many more persons in town this year than usual, on ac count of miltary conditions in women's patriotic movements, that the audionce will be a most representative one. The dance "divertissement" afterward will be a delightful addition to the evening's entertainment.

MOVIE ACTRESSES AND THEIR HAIR Did it ever occur to you that every movie actress you have seen has lovely hair, while the most popume count their curls as their chief beauty? In fact, many are leading ladies just because of their attractive locks. Inquiry among them discloses the fact that they bring out all the natural beauty of their hair by careful shampooing, not with any soap or ful shampooing, not with any soap or makeshift, but with a simple marture by putting a teaspoonful of canthrox (which they get from the druggist) in a cup of hot water and applying this instead of soap. This full cup of shampoo liquid its enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use, the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess of and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. The hair is so fluffy that it looks much heavier than it is, while its lustre and softness is delightful.—ADV.

always crowded, but customers have to for his tankard of beer. Two years ago do without the delicious compound of he gave 24 hellers for it, while now complain of the unproportionate amount

These conditions may be met by persons of means, but the masses can be in no position to purchase food having these inflated values. Great self-denial has to be practiced on all sides by the millions, and the wonder is that poor people can find ways of existing. complaining. How much longer the people can or will live under these conlitions one cannot predict.

There is work in Vienna for all who want it. Certain streets are gay with restaurants and music-hall life, but there are side streets, many of them where misery and suffering are rampant. There are charities for soldier in hundreds of forms, soldiers in the trenches, legless, armless or blind soldiers, and soldiers in hospitals. But the civilian poor appear almost over looked, and their suffering is great Countless poor women and children stand in line waiting for the daily distribution of bread or milk.

Vienna seems to have adjusted itself to war conditions as if warfare had be-come the business of the nation. Naturally, the feminine element is far and away predominant. One does not see much mourning worn, and to go by exwould think, sitting in a theater, that there was no war at all. There is something inexplicable in the psychological attitude of the people. Cafes, hotels and theaters are always crowded, and the Court Opera seems to go on its way as if Austria-Hungary were not involved in the greatest conflict in history. The opera's repertoire s limited chiefly to Wagnerian compositions and standard selections popular 0 or 50 years ago. No work by a living Italian or French composer is given, but 'Alda" has frequent presentations because Verdi no longer lives.

The National Feeding Problem.

With careful economy and prudence per cent crop is sufficient to sustain the 52,000,000 inhabitants of the Dual Monarchy, but with little for waste and less for luxury. Austria-Hungary can feed itself indefinitely on a 70 per cent yearly crop, while a 60 per cent crop would spell famine for millions. A 50 per cent crop means starvation and defeat. Next year's crop will not greatly exceed 50 per cent. First, because 8,000,-000 men, mostly of the agrarian class have been removed from this vocation, and their places in the fields filled by old and infirm men and women and children. Secondly, it calls for little arguprisoners of war assigned to farm labor half-heartedly and perfunctorily. It is believed that a half million prisoners were set to work in Austria and in Hungary for the planting and harvesting

It is a fact that this year's area is lecidedly less than in peace times, and t is likewise true that with fully half of the cattle and horses killed or used n the war, there has been a decided curtailment in the supply of fertilizer. In many parts of the monarchy not enough cattle are left to haul the manure from the barnyard to the fields. The shortage in cattle is best shown by their present value, which is about $1200 for a pair of good oven. A horse ordinarily worth $150 is scarcely obtainable now at $500, while a good cow has a value of at least $300.

Army Grafters Convicted.

In the last few months several army ontractors have been punished with prison sentences for supplying the troops with shoes whose soles and heels were ound to be made chiefly of paper.

Two petroleum refining companies in Galicia are getting rich. The Fanto company's last yearly report announced working profit of 73 per cent, but this vas cast into the shade by the report of the Kolin company, which, with a frankness almost brutal, announced that or the year ending July 1 the profit had been 2,000,000 crowns. As this was earned on a capital of 1,500,000 crowns the profit was just over 133 per cent. From 1907 to 1915 the Kolin company paid its stockholders not a heller in dividends, and Vienna is asking why a company can so suddenly increase its profits from nothing to 133 per cent.

More than three-quarters of the Austrian lace and embroidery factories are closed, and the work people starving. t has not been possible, as in other ranches of the textile industry, to convert these factories into munition works, s the machinery cannot be adapted. Moreover, the supply of raw materials s completely exhausted, and also there is very little demand for laces.

For a year or morre trial by jury has been suspended in Austria. The last de-cree issued in this connection suspended trial by jury on the ground, "First, because it is extremely difficult to draw up lists of men available for service on juries; secondly, because cool and impartial judgment cannot be expected in these abnormal times." Juries really been suspended, however, for fear trials of malcontent Czechs and other

30 Days and 30 Nights—FREE

Get the Nitelite, the electric wizard of the clock world, direct from the factory for a free trial of 30 days and 30 nights. Send no money in advance. Just sign the coupor and mail it to us. Then remit the special price of $6.96 at the rate of only a dollar a month.

The Nitelite is an electric alarm clock, a beautiful and artistic mantel-clock, an electric night-light, and an electric call-bell—all in one. A touch of the button from the bed at any hour of the night not only lights the dial, so that you can tell the fime, but illuminates the entire room. By moving the switch at the side of the clock, it can be used as a call-bell for the nurse or maid. In the sick-room it is an invaluable convenience—necessity, rather. As a call-bell it can be moved to where it is needed, and is absolutely dependable. In addition to all these conveniences, it is a perfect time-piece. It requires no connection with an electric service, and therefore can be used anywhere. The bell and the light are operated by a dry battery encased in the clock. The battery should, under ordinary usage, last at least a year, and can be replaced any time at a trivial cost. The case is of od, 9 inches wide at the base, and 10½ inches high, and is beautifully finished in mahogany

Every home should have a Nitelite; hence we have begun a nation-wide distribution of them direct from the factory, at a special introductory price, and on terms that will give every reliable and pro-

"But," he adds, sagaciously, "the simple is very difficult."

disposal of the allies, especially since the accession of America to our side, is so large that it ought to be possible for wise and resolute naval policy to mee the claims both of the defensive and o the offensive naval school at the same time. We must have a vast blue water fleet, capable of engaging, with good prospects of victory, the full strength of the enemy; but after that has been provided for, immense surpluses not merely of old, but of most valuable vessels remain, and it is in the adapta tion of these for, and their employment in, aggressive action against the enemy that the escape from the present dead-lock could have been found-can still

There is no need to jeopardize blue water supremacy nor the vital forces necessary to sustain it. All the sound arguments which should prevent us from hazarding that can still rule our naval policy. The next few days are crowded with events organized in support of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, so that the prespect for sub-stantial augmentation of the Fund is bright accordingly. The upbuilding can hardly proceed beyond the actual need for keeping pace with the outlay for pure milk and free ice for distribuion among the distressed infants in the If the aggregate amount for the sea son is to reach $5000, the total required, at a conservative estimate, based upon current expenses for the two life-sav ing agencies and the probability of continued hot weather and consequent per-sistent unusual demand, the increase will have to be considerably accelerated. Tomorrow evening, in Gill's Hall, Marcus and Easton avenue, children of Wagner place, who have for some years been steadfast supporters of the cause f the poor babies, will give an entertainment. Advance sales of tickets have brought in more than $14, which fact affords an index to the industry and popularity of the young people. That they are also entertainers of a high order will be made manifest in the in-terpretation of the program, which will nclude a one-act comedy playlet entiled "Keeping House," supplemented by music numbers, vocal and instru mental, recitations and a patriotic tab leau. As a means of swelling the sum realized from admissions, the children will sell refreshments at the close of the program. Encouragement from every quarter has been given the chil-Iren, donations of refreshments for the carnival feature having been generous, the hall was thrown open to them rent ree, and the Larkin Printing Co. do-

Tuesday evening the children of Park iew are to give their annual entertain ment for the babies' relief fund, at the residence of O. D. Kester, 6307 Westminster place. The program is one of marked ambition, calling not only for histrionic talent of a positive type but of staging and costuming skill and scholarship in dancing. All these qualifications are present in ample force with the children who are to produce "The figures and lore, of exacting in costumes and stage effects. The company num bers more than a score of children among the prettiest and most culture in that fashionable quarter of the city. A sum in excess of $25 already has been accumulated through advance sales o tickets. Ice cream cones are to be sold at the conclusion of the performance.

Wednesday evening, a large group ochildren, all of whom have had profes sional training for their rare talents will appear in an entertainment for the Milk and Ice Fund, under direction of Mrs. C. Norris. There are to be interpreted the very latest songs and classical dances, presented with the nicest regard for every detail of finish and que by decoration and illumination. The children who thus assure a delightful evening to all who attend are Marguerite Norris, Thomas Lazear, Dorothy Craig, Rae Hartman, Leona May, Florence Boeger, Dorothy Welsh, Lelia Braun, Mable Bange, Marie Ailer, Grace Darby, Freda Modofsky, Pauline Seltzer Mary Rezikoff, Karona Barsanti, Lule Himelas, James and Hellene Higgins and Pike Jacques.

Churc's to Give a Play. Friday evening the scheduled event ie production of the "Cabbage Hil School" by a strong company of childen, more than a score in number, at the Grace Presbyterian Church, Clara and Ride avenue. Many of the youthful players are members of Grace Church Sunday School, so that the babies' re-lief fund benefit may be said to be inder the auspices of that institution Miss Corinne Steward of 956 Catalpa street, has the direction of the play, and she bears definite testimony to the capa-city and the earnestness of the company. Tickets for the entertainment which is to be of the highest order, are 25 cents, and a considerable number of them already have been sold. The young people who are devoting them-selves assiduously to the undertaking are Misses Blanche Beck, Edna Close, Alice Byrnes, Margaret Roberts, Margaret Calboun, Virginia Talken, Flora Bell, Helen Gould and Constance Abrams and William Skillman, Quinten Gould, Morris Beck and Allan Calhoun Next week also there is a big enter

Just a Word-

It is so true that "Beautiful Homes make a Beautiful World," that in these days of sadness, excitement, patriotic fervor and nervous tension, we must have a place for relaxation and comforting influence. It is, therefore, more important at this time than ever before that your homes be cozy, cheerful and

It is easy to accomplish this without incurring much expense, if you will give us an opportunity to show you the thousands of useful and beautiful pieces which we will have on display for your selection during the next three inspection days, as we are now "Already with all hands on deck," to serve our patrons and visitors.

"I hurried back to the city so as not to miss the opening of your sale."

This and similar messages we have re-ceived during the past week, some even requesting that we lay aside cer-tain pieces they had so much admired. This we refused to do, as we wish to give all the same op-portunity of making their selections during the next Three Courtesy Days—for First Come, First Served.

These daily requests, however, inspire us with the knowledge that Prufrock & Litton, through its many years of constant effort, has earned and enjoys the confidence of St. Louis, and we know this sale, as in each preceding sale, will excel any previous sale in volume of business and pleasant business relations with our patrons.

Ice Fund last season, which was splen- the scope of the affair, which will take the form of a social dance, with a chill successful event of that nature year, and an act by high school girls and boys. She has also fixed the evening of Aug. 12 for the event. It is riskdertaking as one of the triumphant enon, in view of the organizing skill and efficient management of Mrs. Hopkins. Charles L. Holman, president and general manager of the Laclede Gas light Co., has given the heroic dertaking of little Misses Birdie and Leona Hurwitz of 27 Lewis place, to raise $200 for the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, a substantial lift and encouragement. These captivating young sisters visited President Holman on their flower-selling mission and their explicit and convincing stateis sympathy that he wrote them a k for $25 and invited them to pay another visit. That contribution was materially reinforced by lesser ums from other philanthropic men and vomen during the week, so that the campaigners in behalf of the needy infants have gone well past the half-way line of their appointed goal.

One of the really delightful affairs o the past week for the fund was that given by a group of bright and charming children at the home of Mrs. T. M. Biggers, 5854 Romaine place, the finan-cial result being $10. There was singvictrola, the whole constituting an entertainment that was more than pleasing to a large audience. Tickets were cents for children and 10 cents for dults, who received, in addition to the enjoyable program, lemonade and cake. The children desire to make acknowledgmentu of valatle assistance rom the women of the neighborhood in the serving of refreshments, also to the Morrison Tent and Awning Co. for

Romeo and Juliet Staged. The little ones who proved such de-lightful entertainers and hosts during the evening were: Marie and Edward O'Neill, 5879 Romaine place; Catherine and Delaney Curren, 5858 Romaine; Helen and Ruth Biggers, 5854 Romaine, and Theresa Willmering, 5850 Romaine place A three-act play, "Romeo and Juli-ette," was the main feature of a truly fascinating and otherwise successful play for the Milk and Ice Fund, given by a group of talented and pretty chilren on the lawn of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Ryan 5016 St. uis avenue. Anna Marie Ryan was he capable leading character, Juliette, e Esther Lehmann was a thorough-Romantic Romeo and Eleanor Curen a captivating Carmen. There were also well chosen and happily given recitations by Anna Marie Ryan, Eleanor and Alice Curren, Esther and Paul Lehmann. Songs also were interspersed and added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. These were sung by Au-Grey, including "What Do You Want to Make Those Eeyes at Me When They Don't Mean What They Say?" and "I'm Blue, So Blue." Alice Curren also gave an excellent vocal number, "Lullaby," and there was a graceful interpretation of the Manhattan dance by Anna Marie Ryan and of an Irish reel dance by Gainey and Richard E. The performance concluded with patriotic airs sung by the entire company. Those who merit distinction for the positive success achieved in every direction, the sum realized being $10, were: Anna and Marie Ryan, 5016 St. Louis avenue; Eleanor and Alice Curren, 5022 St. Louis: Esther and Paul Lehmann:

To Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

This is the season when she who would have a lily-white complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax. the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the soorched, discolored, frackled, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand-new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the porea, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity. An eunce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mernings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the afternoon or evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered sax-olite in half a pint witch hazel. You'll find this more refreshing than an hour's rest. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deeper ones.

CATHOLIC WOMAN'S

Adds Six Thousand New Members to Roster; is Doing War Relief Work.

The St. Louis Catholic Woman's League last week added 6000 mem bers to its roster.

The league is one of the youngest of the women's war relief organiza-tions of the city. It was organized June 18, in affiliation with the Wom-en's Committee, Council of National Defense, to combine the various Catholic sodalities, social and benefit organizations of the St. Louis liocese, in war relief work. It works in co-operation with the Women's Food Conservation Committee, the local Red Cross and other recognized war relief bodies.

The 6000 increase of membership was gained mainly through consolidation into its organization of the Children of Mary of the Academy of the Visitation in Cabanne, which brought into its ranks a large and organized body of workers who had already been diligent in Red Cross work, and sodalities and other societies of some of the larger parishes of the city, St. Farneis Xavier's Church alone enrolling 700 workers rom its Mary and Martha and Altar Societies.

The Visitation group made its first appearance under the control of the eague last week, when it turned out, in a single day, 1500 sheets for the

The Catholic Women's League will have July 30 as its next day in charge of the Red Cross workrooms n the Kinloch Building. Beginning Sept. 1 they will take over that work oom one day each week.

ARABELLA ON DECK.

ISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, if pleasure you would give her Some sunny day just take her down to ride upon the river, Of course a skiff you'll never need when steamboats are so handy; By all the girls it is agreed excursioning is dandy. she needs is just a hunch that you would like to take her; She'll fill a basket up with lunch and good things from the baker And when you see her you'll confess that never in creation In any white and simple dress was greater fascination. And while the hurdy-gurdy plays its notes will seem entrancing While in her beaming eyes you gaze when she and you are dancing. You'll buy her ice cream cones and fudge and other sweet confections And when your hunger gives a nudge you'll eat that lunch in sections. No meal could ever taste so good, no better board you'd ask it. Than table made of plainest wood and Arabella's basket. Your dining room's the lower deck where breezes rare are blowing And appetite knows never check as on your way you're going. At last the evening shades fall, the moon comes up a-smiling; Forgotten are your troubles all in this the hour beguiling. REAT curiosity as to Emma Goldman is reported from Jefferson City, but no sympathy. An impractical impractical is past forgiveness. Emma was advised by a friend some years ago to take up her abode in Russia, where there was something to be accomplished. What a bet she did overlook in not taking that advice! She might have been the heroine of the Russian revolution and left after her a monument in the Nevsky Prespect. The trouble with Emma was that the big political parties were stealing her thunder right under her nose, and she didn't realize it. The Republicans raided her Jovian junk-box for a time, and when Mr. Wilson came along the Democrats took box and all. Like Othello, the Goldman-Berkmann crowd found them selves without an occupation. he story of Pagliacci follows: In the orchestral introduction Tonio an Italian village. Canio and his the skin amazingly. roupe of strolling players, or Pagliacci, have paraded through the village. Canio announces a performance for that evening and goes with Peppe into the tavern. Tonlo, the clown, remains behind ostensibly to care for the donkey but takes advantage of his master's absence to make love to Nedda. Canjo's wife. She repulses him scornfully, striking him with her whip, and he swears to be revenged. Silvio, a rich young villager, in love with Nedda, now joins her and begs her to fly with him. She refuses, but admits that she loves him, her confession being over-heard by Tonio, who hurries in search of his master. Canio returns too late to see Silvio, but hears Nedda's parting words, "Forever I am thine." Mad with jealousy, he demands the lover's name, and when Nedda refuses, tries to Nedda goes to dress and Canio is in despair at the thought of being obliged to play while his heart is breaking.

A Play Within a Play. In the second act the curtain rises on the same scene as the play is about to begin. This proves to be the usual farce, in which the clown makes love to Columbine during the absence of her husband, Punchinello, but is laughed at, and resigns his pretensions finally consenting to act as lookout while Columbine and her accepted lover, Harlequin, dine together.

This conventional farce is very like the situation in the real lives of the players, and when Punchinello (Canio) arrives and surprises the lovers, as the play demands, he loses his head when he hears Columbine repeat in the farce the very words he overheard her say to her real lover earlier in the day. Mad with rage, he again demands her lover's name. Nedda tries to save the situation by continuing the play, while the audience is delighted by such realistic acting until the intensity of Canio's passion begins to terrify them. The other players endeavor to silence him, but in vain. Finally, stung by his taunts, Nedda defles him and is stabbed. Canlo hoping that in her death agony she will reveal the name of her lover. She falls, calling upon Silvio, who rushes from the crowd only to receive in turn the dagger of the outraged husband. As Canio is disarmed by the peasants he cries as if in a dream, "La commedia e finita" (The comedy is ended).

Food Meeting at Pairground. Food conservation will be discussed at a meeting of St. Louis and St Louis County council of mothers' circles and parent teachers' associations at Fairground Wednesday afternoon The public is invited.

he story of Pagliacci follows:

have paraded through the village. Canio announces a performance for that evening and goes with Peppe into the tavern. Tonio, the clown, remains behind ostensibly to care for the donkey but takes advantage of his master's absence to make love to Nedda, Canio's She repulses him scornfully, striking him with her whip, and he swears to be revenged. Silvio, a rich young villager, in love with Nedda, now joins her and begs her to fly with him. She refuses, but admits that she loves him, her confession being over-heard by Tonio, who hurries in search of his master. Canio returns too late to see Silvio, but hears Nedda's parting words, "Forever I am thine." Mad with jealousy, he demands the lover's name, and when Nedda refuses, tries to kill her, but is restrained by the others. Nedda goes to dress and Canio is in despair at the thought of being obliged to play while his heart is breaking.

A Play Within a Play.
In the second act the curtain rises on the same scene as the play is about to begin. This proves to be the usual farce, in which the clown makes love to Columbine during the absence of her husband, Punchinello, but is laughed at, and resigns his pretensions, finally consenting to act as lookout while Columbine and her accepted lover, Harlequin, dine together.

This conventional farce is very like the situation in the real lives of the players, and when Punchinello (Canio) arrives and surprises the lovers, as the play demands, he loses his head when he hears Columbine repeat in the farce the very words he overheard her say to her real lover earlier in the day. Mad with rage, he again demands her lover's name. Nedda tries to save the situation by continuing the play, while the audience is delighted by such realistic acting until the intensity of Canio's passion begins to terrify them. The other players endeavor to silence him, but in vain. Finally, stung by his taunts. Nedda defles him and is stabbed. Canlo hoping that in her death agony she will reveal the name of her lover. She falls, calling upon Silvio, who rushes from the crowd only to receive in turn the dagger of the outraged husband. As Canio is disarmed by the peasants he cries as if in a dream, "La ommedia e finita" (The comedy is Actually Removes Roots and All) The vexed question of how to com-pletely banish superfluous hair has been solved at last! By means of the new solved at last: By means of the new phelactine process, the hairs entire, roots and all, come out before your very eyes —easily, harmlessly, "quick as a wink." It is so different from the depliatory, electrical and shaving methods, you sim-ply must try it to fully appreciate its remarkable advantages.

Brand New Way to Remove Hairy Growths

remarkable advantages.

Phelactine is perfectly odorless, nonirritating, non-poisonous—a child could cat it without the least injury. It leaves the skin so soft, smooth and hairless, no one could tell you ever had a moustache or other hairy growth. If you will procure a stick of phelactine and follow the strongle instructions, you will ceptainly be simple instructions, you will certainly be astonished and delighted with the result —or drugged will refund the price upon request.—ADV.

Mrs. Daisy Ella Nirdlinger Must Have Money Subscribed by August 1.

Miss Daisy Ella Nirdlinger, presilent of the Josephine Club, a working girls' home, has started a camign to collect $10,000 to clinch onditional gift of nearly $100,000 by Mrs. Hannah Duryea of Jennings, St. Louis County to establish a home for curables and convalescents. In or $10,000 must be raised by August 1 which Mrs. Duryea pledged $50,000 ash and a 10-room house on a five-cre plot at Jennings for a charitable nstitution to be known as "The Han-nah Home for Incurables and Conalescents."

Mrs. Duryea is 84 years old and is ow at St. Ann's Hospital, Page and nion boulevards. She is the widow of Abram W. Durvea, who operated a eamboat between St. Louis and New Orleans. She has no children or near relatives, and announced last year that she intended to dispose of ner fortune while she lived to prevent itigation or trouble by heirs after her death.

Agreement Expires Aug. 1. Mrs. Duryea deeded the Jennings ouse and ground to Miss Nirdlinger be held, together with $50,000 cash and some personal property as an endowment fund, in escrow pending fulfillment of the conditions of the agreement, which expires Aug. 1 ext. Should the required $10,000 be onated, the proposed home, which already has been incorporated with Mrs. Duryea as president, will beome an established fact.

Miss Nirdlinger told a Post-Dispatch eporter that Mrs. Duryea was anxious gift and hoped that the citizens would idicate an appreciation of the need for such an institution by contributing the desired sum. August A. Busch, Miss, Nirdlinger said, has promised to assist the movement.

Louis," Miss Nirdlinger pointed "and now we have an opportunity secure a $100,000 instituon for one-tenth of this sum. itals will care for incurable charity patients only for a few weeks at most, and as a result these tragic cases are ot properly treated.

Location Is Ideal. "The Duryea home at Jennings is an eal building and location for care and reatment of incurables. The grounds re spacious and well cultivated and have a plentiful supply of fine water. We can promise that incurables will not be taken there merely to die, for the place presents splendid opportunity or their employment in the flower gardens and vegetable plots."

nclude property worth $30,000 to Father factory site to the United Workers for he Blind, property valued at $25,000 to $40,000 to St. Louis University and large gifts to St. Ann's Orphan Asylum. Her estate at Jennings originally was 200 acres. Ten years ago she gave 60 acres to St. Ann's Orphan Asylum for a dairy farm and since has given small areas to other institutions, until only the five acres on which the house

LEGHORNS CHEAPEST

Fact Disclosed Through Feeding Test Conducted by U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Island Reds and Orpingtons. This fact, which confirms the belief and expereaten by the general-purpose breeds, and because their egg yield very materially xceeds that of general-purpose breeds during their second and third laying ears. Leghorns, the specialists say, un oubtedly are more profitable to keep for the production of eggs only.

In this test the feed cost of a dozer eggs for one of the Leghorn pens, was 34 cents in 1913, while the average cost of all the pens of the general-purpose reeds was 10.6 cents. In 1914 the feed ost of a dozen eggs for the same pen o eghorns was 8.7 cents as against an av erage cost of 15.1 cents for the second aying year of the general-purpose pens. During their third laying year the cost of a dozen eggs was 8.8 cents, compared to 18.6 cents for the general-purpos fowls. The total value of eggs per hen ver feed cost in the Leghorn pen for three years was $6.84 against $4.30 for he general purpose hens. The highes egg production obtained in any of the feeding experiments up to 1915 was by a en of Leghorns which laid 157.6 eggs per hen, at a feed cost of 6.7 cents a lozen. The Leghorns produce smaller egg than the general-purpose breeds. The verage weight of the eggs of a pen of Leghorns during the first laying year vas 1.42 pounds per dozen, as against .53 to 1.58 pounds for the other pens. However. Leghorns laying eggs weighing 1.50 pounds per dozen, or even more, the specialists say, have been selected and bred by many poultrymen. An examination in May, 1915, of 500 eggs from hree Leghorn pens showed that 31 per ent weighed more than two ounces piece, or 1.50 bunds to the dozen.

The value per dozen of the eggs pro uced by the Leghorns was from one to three cents less each year than the eggs of general-purpose hens. This differ-ence is due to the fact that the generalurpose breeds are better winter layers than the Leghorns, while the latter give a higher production in the spring and proody, which probably materially affects their egg yield as compared with the general-purpose breeds. Better fertility in the eggs, especially with stock confined to the yards, is more often secured with Leghorns than with the gen eral-purpose or any of the heavier

Poultry Raising to

Soften War Conditions In a specially prepared article touch ng the combination of the Departmen in an effort for increased poultry proluction to soften war conditions, Charles Key Cullom, secretary of the Missour Poultry Breeders' Association, says:

"It is possible for a hen to produc eight or ten times her weight in eggs during one year. It is also possible for the hen to do all that is necessary for her to do to reproduce herself 200 times each year. This, of course, means the artificial incubation of her eggs. Therefore, in this time of need, when the food supply of the world is at the lowest ebb in history, poultrymen have the opportunity of 'doing their bit' toward winning the world war-and, incident tally, while doing a patriotic duty, these poultrymen will be adding to their ow bank accounts. "I would urge that every poultry raiser, whether a back-lotter or the owner of a large-flock of chickens continue hatching for several weeks. It is true late-hatched chicks require more attention than those brought out earlies in the season, but it is equally true that that the regular breeding season is practically over, I would like to see very Missouri fancier offer hatching eggs and breeding stock to beginners at greatly reduced prices in order to encourage more people to take up poultry culture.

Serious Blunder in Killing Young Chicks

Killing the first fries or broilers is almost a crime. The first chick that looks large enough for the purpose, es right there we are often in the wrong. Ve select a cockerel that first show strong red comb, manifests character istic male vigor, is broader and fatte brighter, better developed plumage. This is the very sort that should be kept for Those who object to control of prices the breeding pen next year. Of course if one is breeding pure-bred, fancy stock, such a bird may later disappoint early expectations, but in general such a cockerel should be preserved. If you keen him and breed him next season stamp his good qualities upon his progeny.

This year you may have one or tw ike him in the little flock. Next year, you keep this one and other males ike him, you will have more like him He may be worth 10 of the ordinary vigor and early maturing qualities we re all the time looking for, and without which profit with poultry is

Fall Chicks Hatch

More fall chicks than usual should be hatched this year. They are not so atisfactory as spring chicks, but are often quite satisfactory. They will not lay during the first winter, but they will be good layers in midsummer of next year. Of course one requires good facilitie for keeping such chicks during the late fall and winter, but this is not difficult. If you have been disappointed in he number of chicks already out, try getting out some fall chicks. In England hicks are quite commonly hatched the year round.

If you are going to try this plan be careful to keep and use for the purpose only the best, most vigorous males and for Egg-Production Eggs are the foundation of the poultry business, a statement that bears repetition. Most flocks should be handle l with an eye to egg production as the should tend in this direction. So, too should constant culling and selection We put a premium upon the hen or pullet that lays in winter. Premiu should also be put upon the hen that lays in July and August, when many do not. The hen that stops laying July chicks will thrive wonderfully. Now 1 and molts is probably not a profitable nen. The hen that lays in July and August and molts later is the kind co tie to, other things being equal.

In selecting pullets to be kept for future layers, care should be exercised. Of course, much depends upon the variety, but in general it may be said that the pullet which does not lay before keep a dozen hens with a large dry- a profitable layer. Unwise to Reduce Poultry Flock

Most of those who have sold their poultry flocks or reduced them greatly on account of high prices for feed, have been mistaken. It doesn't matter so much to the manufacturer, so far as his profits are concerned, if his raw materials cost more, provided the finished product sells at a correspondingly high-In many cases poultry profits are necessarily reduced, but some breeders claim they are making at least as much money as ever. Even if one does not make a profit temporarily this is not a valid reason for going out of business. The poultry industry will be good whether we have a short war or a long one. Our population is growing. The proportion of people living in the cities is increasing. The best part of the history of the poultry business lies in the future. It is a time for poultry raisers trouble with this description is that it to stand pat, or at least not to go back-

"Well, what about it?" Soldiers Still Con The small group of American sol-diers who arrived with General Pershing and his staff found their rations at a French barracks ample in quantity and pleasing in quality, and yet they had cause for complaint.

"I do wish they'd get all the stuff on the table at once," grumbled an enlisted man after being served with spinach as a separate course. "I don't want to be surprised, I want to be fed." He did not complain however, that contrary to the American custom there was a generous wine allowance for each soldier. My first sight of a Parisian restau rant was disturbing, for a large sign over the door proclaimed the fact that the establishment served ham and sauerkraut. It did not sound like the sort of thing of which a restaurant keeper should boast, least of all a French one. Neither the ham nor the sauerkraut proved compulsory, and was served at a cost of four france which amounts to about 75 cents at the present rate of exchange. There were hors d'ouvre, a thick pes soup, a sizeable trout, a small portion of scrambled eggs, spinach, preserved cherries and cheese. Present-day desperate demand in the Central empires for a peace without indemnities and annexations contrasts strangely with ambitious terms that Teutonic chiefs expected to enforce upon a shattered entente view of the growing demand in Germany and Austria for a peace offer on the principle of no indemnities and no annexations, it is interesting to note the vast change that has taken place in Teutonic public opinion in the past two years. It would almost be amusing if the entire situation were not so serious.

In 1915 when the God of Victory perched high on the German 42's, when the Russians were in headlong flight, their armies demoralized and the country in an utterly chaotic condition, when the greater part of indutsrial France lay suppliant under the heel of the invader and Great Britain was battering its armies and ships to pieces against the rocks of Gallipoli there was only one question in the German mind-how much territory and how much indemnity shall we demand from the beaten foe?

There were those who insisted that Poland, the Baltic Provinces, Belgium, the French Meuse provinces, Calais and other channel ports must be incorporated in the German empire. England would be let off with an indemnity but India, Ireland and other British colonial possessions could be given their autonomy. The Balkans were to be so distributed between Germany and her allies so as to assure a German path from Berlin to the Persian Gulf and the Hindu Kash.

There were those less conservative who thought that the retention of Belgium and the Longwy district of France would be sufficient in the way of territory. There were also a few level headed Germans, even in that time who thought the best Germany could get would be spheres of influence in the Balkans and Mesopotamia.

Here are the views of some of the German leaders as to the war aims of Germany in 1915 and their predictions as to what the war would be expected to bring forth in the next two years:

DR. SOLF, German Minister of Colonies.

Oct. 9, 1915. WE will maintain our previous colonial possessions and even increase them after the war. Our only enemy from the colonial point of them after the war. Every new army that will pass through the Kilikia gate of the city of Saladin will aggravate the terror of London. On the day when the British army on the Nile capitulates to the Turks or when they have to embark at Alexandria, the world power of Great Britain will sink into the deep from Gibraltar to Singapore. What she will save out of this catastrophe will not be decided by England alone.'

RUDOLPH MARTIN, Former Minister of the Interior of Germany. March 9, 1915.

"GERMANY will dictate peace in London after two years more of fighting. First of all, an indemnity of 80 milliards of marks (18 billions) will be demanded, to be received by Germany, Austria and Turkey in the proportion of 16, 10 and 4. Germany will be established along the present French coast in a condition to control both Paris and London and possessed of thousands of flying machines and 20,000 trained aviators. England will be forced to consent to the construction of a channel tunnel equipped with four railroad tracks and an automobile highway, each end of which will be guarded by German troops. "Russia will be completely dismembered and divided among the neighboring Powers. New states will be formed in the process of dismemberment, reigned over by Prussian Princes.

"Not only is Alsace-Lorraine to remain German, but the great fortress of Belfort will also be lost to the French.

"Of course, German army corps will have to be maintained both in France and England for from five to ten years to see that the terms of peace are carried into effect, but this would be done at the expense of those countries.

"If Germany, Austria and Turkey want to benefit for all time from the war they would do well to prepare at once a common taxation agreement to extend from Hamburg to Basra on the Red Sea and from Calais to Baku on the Caspian Sea."

man conducting the drill knows his business. And the impression that the young instructor knows his game is well founded, for the instructor is Capt. Charles Sweeny of the Foreign Legion, fresh from the battlefields of France, where he saw service from the first outbreak of the great conflict in August, 1914. "Sweeny of the Foreign Legion," a native-born American, knows the fighting game because he learned it under very practical conditions.

Born in San Francisco some 35 years ago, Sweeny passed his early years in Spokane, Wash., of which city his father was a prominent citizen.

Young Sweeny inherited his fighting spirit from the elder Sweeny, who was born in New Jersey in 1846, and who ran away from home to join the Federal army at the age of 15. A mixture of Irish and French blood has provided the Sweenys with more than their rightful share of martial spirit. When the Civil War was ended, Charles Sweeny Sr. had not received his fill of fighting, so he went to Mexico and enlisted to fight Maximilian's army in 1866. He was captured by the French at Acapulco and owing to his youth was released from prison, placed on a boat and sent to California, with instructions not to return. He migrated from the Golden State to Nevada, where he soon embarked into the only business of those days in the Far West, namely mining. The elder Sweeny soon became superintendent of the Consolidated Virginia Mines at Virginia City, Nev., and later discovered the rich Coeur d'Alene mines in Idaho. He was one of the promoters of the Federal Mine and Smelting Co., which took over practically all the mines of that region. Through his mining holdings the elder Sweeny became immensely wealthy.

Charles Sweeny Jr., as he approached maturity, quickly developed the sturdy qualities that had made the father one of the pioneer adventurers of the early West. Young Sweeny received his early education at Notre Dame, where he was a pitcher on the 'varsity' baseball team, and later was at West Point for three years, from 1900 to

A soldier of fortune from early manhood, Sweeny has seen life under varying conditions.

Shortly after leaving college Sweeny was a member of a railroad engineering corps in British Columbia. He helped to survey and build railroad lines in the mountains of Canada. He belonged to one of Jim Hill's surveying gangs and worked along the lines of the Great Northern and branches. He went to Mexico as an employe of the American Smelter Refineries at Monterey, where he was an assayist and chemist. Later he was an ore buyer for the wealthy Madero interests at Torreon. He saw much of life in the Mexico of those days. In fact, his cup of experience was about filled to the brim on this side of the Atlantic re he decided to seek larger fields abroad

He went to Paris in 1909. The great French metropolis constituted a sort of headquarters for the adventurer, from which he traveled through Northern Africa, Algiers, Tunis and even South America. He traveled all the way to the Sahara Desert, looking things over. Though plentifully supplied with money from wealthy parents, and living the life of a nomad, Sweeny was no. without ambition. He studied in the years 1909, 1910 and 1911 at the law school of the University of Paris and the School of Political Sciences. He attended lectures at the famous military schools of Paris, where he received entree through acquaintance with French army officers.

When the stern edict of war was handed down from Berlin in that fateful month of August, 1914, Sweeny at once saw an opportunity for more adventure and a chance to serve the France he had learned to love. Not only was it a chance for a scrap, but it meant to Sweeny and a little band of Americans in the French capital the occasion for repaying a long-overdue obligation to

La Belle France. Gathering together his rather unsoldierly looking little group of adventuresome Americans, Sweeny took them to Rouen, where they became members of the picturesque Foreign Legion, that organization described as men of all crimes and colors. Among those who con-

Of this daring little band only Sweeny and Thaw, the latter famous aviator of the Lafayette escadrille, survive.

Alan Seeger was killed in action on July 4, 1916; Kenneth Weeks was killed at Souchez, on June 17, 1915, as a grenadier; Kiffin Rockwell was shot down by a German aviator after establishing a wonderful record as an air fighter: Steve MacGordon returned to Canada and was a military avia-

Sweeny received the cross of the Legion of Honor and the War Cross in 1915. Few Americans have received equal recognition at the hands of the French Government, for it must be remembered that it cannot be said of the French service as was stated in the German Reichstag some time ago, with usefulness has been so much accentuated reference to the Kaiser's lavish distribution by this war, he is impressed that the young of decorations that "the shower of iron

Entering the legion as a private, he rose by successive promotion to Corporal, Sergeant, Second Lieutenant, Lieutenant and finally to the rank of Cap-All promotions in the legion are based on demonstrated merit and service. This famous fighting organization knows no "pull," no politics; the worth of every man is known to his comrades. That the "fighting Irishman" did his part well is attested by the honors heaped on him. The legion was commanded largely by old legionaries from Algiers when Sweeny and his comrades enlisted. The Irish-American soon received his first taste of military authority when he was promoted to Corporal. He soon learned that maintaining discipline in that motley crew was tough work. This service is distinctly one where "distance lends enchantment to the view." But young Sweeney had been hardened by his experiences in the Far West of America and in the wilds of old Mexico.

Learning the war game in a

After 12 months of hard service, Sweeny's regiment was honored by President Poincare presenting it with a battle flag. This marked the admission of the legion to equal footing with the regiments of the line. Sixty days later this same battle flag was taken across the Seine to the Hotel des Invalides and decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor, and with appropriate ceremony, was placed reverently between the flag of the cuirassiers who died at Reichshofen and the equally famous standard which the Garibaldians carried aloft in 1870-71.

In this grim two months the legion had thrown itself into a hundred battles from Souain to the Ferme Navarin, and from Somme Py to the Butte de Souain. The "fighting Irishman" is back on good old American soil, but most of his companions, gathered from the four corners of the earth, molder in unmarked graves on the soil of the beloved France for which they battled so he-

But Sweeny did not pass through the flery furnace of war unscathed. It was in the battle of Champagne, in September, 1915, that Sweeny, then a Second Lieutenant, was shot through the chest and liver. He had just been promoted. The legion, as usual, had led the attack, and the mortality was terrific Sweeny had become a veteran by 12 months' fighting when his first serious wound was received. Like every soldier becomes sooner or later, he is a fatalist. He believes "the one" leaden missile intended for him will be the only one capable of ending his career. 'Two days before the forward movement began in the Champagne battle we were even told the exact number of field pieces and heavy guns which would support us and the number of shells to be fired by each piece. Our artillery had orders to place four shells per meter per minute along the length of the German lines. We were informed by our Captain regarding the number of German batteries in front of us. He even told us the regimental number of the Prussian and Saxon regiments opposite our line. From him w also learned that along the whole length of our first row of trenches steps had been cut into the front bank in order to enable us to mount without delay and that our own barbed-wire entanglements in front of the trenches had been pierced by lanes cut through every two meters, so that we might advance without the slightest hindrance. On the night before the time set for the attack the commissioned officers, including the Colonel of the regiment, entered the front line trenches, and with stakes marked the front to be occupied by our regiment during the attack. Nothing was left to chance. Our line of advance was carefully described. Natural objects served as guides. The engineers were shown piles of bridging ready made in section planking, so that they might be readily placed over the German trenches and thus permit our guns and supply wagons to cross quickly behind our advance. Fifteen minutes after 9 the next morning was set for the time of advance. Every man knew the hour. One hour before the appointed time we passed the final inspection and deposited our last letters with the regimental Postmaster. Those letters were in the minds of all the men in the long interim that followed. It was not so long, but it seemed an endless time. Suddenly the soldiers began to sing the Marseillaise. Our men were ready and confident.

"It had become 11 p. m. We were at the mouth of the communicating trench and entering it, one by one. Every so often, short traverse trenches opened up to right and left, each one crammed full of soldiers. Talking, singing and laughing had stopped. We continued to march along the trench, (Continued on Page : :n.)

After the Russian people and the soldie s had for weeks teetered between a separate peace and a continuation of the war, and finally had resisted the blandishments of the German propagandists and heeded the importunities of their own leaders, it was Gen. Korniloff who was chosen to lead the army in its first smash against the Germans. Under his command it drove the enemy back in Galicia, captured Halicz, and in only two or three days the men had set the r eyes toward Lemberg, captured months before by the Teutons. Korniloff, too, attempted to resign in the troublous early days of the revo-

Gen. Brusiloff, like a great many other soldiers who have risen to supreme command, is a cavalryman. His short, compact and astonishingly light figure and his general air and quickness of address have caused several writers to compare him with the late Lord Roberts. Although he is 63 years old, in appearance he is a man of 50 who has lived the greater part of his life in the open.

At the outbreak of the Turkish War, Brusiloff was in the Corps de Pages, which he left for active service. By virtue of his origin he had the privilege of serving in Russia's crack regiment, the Guard, but the young soldier elected to enlist in a Caucasian cavalry regiment, with which he served throughout the campaign. Then for two years he took a course at a famous school of cavalry, where he became a protege of the noted French riding master, Philles, who had entered the Russian service.

At about this period the young cavalryman came under the notice of Grand Duke Nicho'as, who picked him out for rapid promotion. Came

It pleases him at meal time to invite to the table a few of his higher officers, but at these repasts "talking shop" is strictly forbidden and only soldierly camaraderi? is allowed to prevail. He delights in a joke and inspires his comrades to return in kind. On one occasion a fly was floating in his soup. The General sent for the cook, who arrived in a great state of consternation.

"Another time," Brusiloff commanded, "see to it that flies don't fall in the soup. Never forget that great truth that flies should be served in a separate dish.'

When necessity arises Brusiloff can be the martinet, and a severe one, but it is said of him that he is stricter with himself than with anyone else. For 18 months he never left the army and never saw his family for a day. At last his wife came to visit him and after two weeks passed Brusiloff told her that it was time for her to return to Moscow. But those around him, who had been charmed by the society of Mme. Brusiloff, hinted that it would be well if she could remain a day or two longer. "Not another day, not in any case," the General re-"When once there is an order that wives can visit their husbands for a fortnight, this rule must be binding for all. And as it is binding for ensigns and > thinking that the commander of an army should merely sit at his headquarters or drive around visiting the staffs or corps or divisions. On the contrary, a commander must be visible at the front and under fire, so that officers and soldiers may see him and 'feel' his presence and so that he may witness the actual circumstances of the battle. Only by these means can there be a living bond between a commander and the army.'

Of personal fear Brusiloff has none. Often it has been said to him:

"Your excellency, in the town there are many stone houses, and it is safer. Every day air pirates fly about and throw bombs, and you remain in that frail carriage.'

"Do not imagine," Brusiloff answers, "that, for the sake of personal security, I would lose that splendid 'octact' which I now have with the troops."

Officers who have served under Gen. Brusiloff refer to him as "a great chief." He is kindly and sympathetic toward them, liberally helps men burdened with large families out of his own pocketbook, possesses the art of addressing troops, and is quick to recognize the efforts of officers of lower grades. Over his higher officers he exercises a sort of dictatorship and any contradiction frets and irritates him. But he is quick to recover and recognize the value of disinterested advice.

One of Brusiloff's corps commanders, after a complicated and difficult maneuver, bitterly contested by the enemy, felt that his prestige had suffered in the judgment of his superior. He wanted to explain things and sought to discover whether he still had the confidence of his chief.

"As you are still at the head of your corps," Brusiloff told him, dryly, "there is no need for any answer. Had you ceased to have my confidence, you would have gone by now."

Gen. Korniloff is in many respects the prototype of Brusiloff, but his rise was much the more romantic. He is a younger man by nearly two score years. Early in life he began rough forest work and did not begin to receive inof the world's foremost soldiers, acquiring in this way a mass of technical knowledge which became of immense value in 1914 and after. Even after the outbreak watching. On these excursions the General always is received the rank of colonel, and here he first had the of the Eighth army, he did a great deal of reading, but bull terrier. With every were the Austrian generals with Korniloff's accomplishments and bearing that they honored him by returning his sword. After a daring flight from an Austrian prison and astonishing adventures he reached Russia.

In addition to his knowledge of mathematics, Gen.

Korniloff has an amazing gift of languages. He speaks not only all European tongues, but converses readily in Persian, Chinese and every dialect of Central Asia.

The appointment of Brusiloff is a victory for law, order and the completion of the war by victory over the Central Powers as far as Russia's part in that victory is concerned. Brusiloff is not only the Russian soldiers' idol, he is an idol of the Russian masses. His face has been steel-set against Germany for many years, he never has had anything but anger and contempt for the pro-German intriguers at Petrograd, never anything but impatience with the belief-whether held by the revolutionary leaders or their predecessors in governmentthat there was any other way to the triumph of Russian freedom than that over the dead bodies of the enemy, A year ago he said: "My one desire is to do for Russia all that lies in my power. It does not matter so much where the fighting line extends-have we not two continents behind us!-because the outcome of the war will be settled, not by the occupation of territory, but by the destruction of the enemies' armies and resources."

Little French fishing boat, manned by only six men and carrying a small gun, gave battle to a big submersible, and although the little craft was sinking under their feet, the crew continued firing until they saw the "pirate" slide under the waves with its stern high in the air—This was the end of the German "pirate" who aroused the Breton folk to a fury by commandeering their white wine -:- -:- -:-

IX Breton fishermen are listed today among the heroes of France. Not only were they received with wild acclaim by the folk of their home village, but they are seeing their portraits in the great newspapers of Paris.

The men were the crew of a little French fishing boat, which sank a German submarine. The following account of how they did it is drawn from an article in L'Illustration, of Paris. Just before dawn on March 18, the distant sound of cannon-firing was heard. Somebody said: the German going after his white wine."

Everybody got ready for immediate action. At six bells the yawl was about 10 miles from the Rochebonne Bank, west a quarter north from the Pone des Baleins (Ile de Re), heading northeast and, having close by her the fishing boats Pierre Emile and Petite-Desiree. The Rochebonne Bank, 37 miles west of the Ile de Re and 31 miles south of the Ile de Yeu, rises almost to the surface in the sea 30 fathoms deep, and is one of the most dangerous spots on the sea is often high and angry over the bank and along its edges. But that day, although so near the equinox, it was quite calm. At seven bells the U-boat for which they were watching suddenly emerged 500 yards ahead of the Hyacinthe - Yvonne, headed southwest directly toward the little fishing craft. The submarine had scarcely risen from the water when a hatchway opened, two men appeared upon the deck, aimed a three-inch gun at the yawl and fired. They got into the little skiff, which was making water like a basket, and bailed it with casseroles, singing the while—for all were so happy at having defeated an enemy vastly superior in strength.

> About a quarter after eight bells the Hyacinthe-Yvonne gently sank. Saluted by sailors, sadly, it is true-for a boat is a sort of sweetheart. But they ere quite satisfied with the feat they had accomplished. And they sang again as they rowed across the 300 yards of floating oil that marked the spot where the submarine had gone to the bottom. A few minutes later the Pierre-Emile took the brave fellows on board.

Thus did the crew of the little yawl Hyacinthe-Yvonne hold up the traditions of the intrepid Breton fisherermen. Thus did six humble satiors on a small sailboat give battle to the most perfect of war machines, the most dreaded instrument of modern "fearfulness," rushing undaunted into the fusillade of artillery and replying calmly and accurately with their one small gun. Thus did they, like knights of the days of chivalry, fight and slay the dreaded sea monster that had been devouring the hard-working toilers of the ocean and spread-ing desolation and panic in many a humble village.

Thus did they earn the honor of having their names immortalized in the annals of the French navy—Hya-ciathe Cuisiat, Laurent Vichon, August Moveron, Georges Butaud, Georges Petoit and Jean Philbert, all of Les Sables, cited in the orders of the day for dis-tinguished bravery in the ace of the enemy.

And who can describe the roes, the wild acclaim of the little villages they had freed!

"Suddenly the U-boat plunges head-foremost; about 25 feet of its stern rises from the water and remains in an almost vertical position for four or five minutes."

TEACHING CAMOUFLAGE, THE REAL "ART" • OF WAR, TO AMERICA'S SOLDIERS

CAMOUFLAGE—Humbugging disguise; its main principle is the destruction of outline by paint or other artifice. See Camoufle; Camoufleur.

UCH is the made-to-order definition of one of the newest words in our language, put there by the necessities of war. It will not be found in any dictionary as yet, but it will soon be there in its proper place, precise and up-to-date. The adaptive and imaginative Frenchman coined it; the Britishers were slow to take up this new art of concealing themselves and their equipment from the common enemy. In fact, so much so that their chief protagonist, H. G. Wells, goes after his compatriots in this fashion:

"The principle of breaking the outline does not seem to be fully grasped upon the British front. Much of the painting of guns and tents that one sees is a feeble and useless dabbing or striping; some of the tents I saw were done in concentric bands of radiating stripes that would on the whole increase their visibility from above. In one place I haw a hangar painted a good gray-green, but surrounded and outlined by white tents, * * * My impression—and it may be quite an unjust one—was that some of our British Colonels misunderstand and dislike camouflage."

Be that as it may, America is for this now highly developed trick-of-war, brush, tube, palette and all. Two hundred of the foremost artists of New York and other cities have already responded to the call, and when our cannon roll out towards the front they will look like the grassy ground, from above; and our hangars and our camps and our depots for munitions and supplies will be peaceful bits of meadowland or forest, as viewed from the German aeros, circling the blue; a tarpaulin covering a pile of big shells lying in a roadway will have the dust of the road and the green of its edges reproduced upon it-our army is for the camouflage, first, last and all the time!

Sherry E. Fry and Barry Faulkner, two New York artists who were the recipients of the American prize to Rome, were the prime movers in the American camouflage. They enlisted the aid of several others—Walter Hale, Edwin Blashfield, J. Alden Weir and men of similar distinction, and called a meeting. The American Academy of Design went in, and the Architectural League, followed by the Society of Illustrators and the Society of Scene Painters. Mr. Blashfield was made chairman and Mr. Fry secretary. Then Washington was notified, and an appreciative letter returned from the office of the Chief of Staff.

A battalion of four companies of the camouflage is tentatively proposed for each field army of from four to six divisions. Each company will consist of a Captain of camouflage, with three or four Lieutenants, eight or 10 Sergeants, 15 to 20 Corporals and the remainder privates. Its members will be put on a strictly military basis as to pay and allowances. A committee of the War College

The Camouflage Battery

(From "Italy, France and Britain at War.")
BY H. G. WELLS.

HE battery was the most unobtrusive of batteries. Its one desire seemed to to be to appear a simple piece of woodland in the eye of God and the airplane. I went about the network of railways and paths under the trees that a modern battery requires, and came presently upon a great gun that even at the first glance seemed a Pittle less carefully hidden than its fellows. Then I saw that it was a most ingenious dummy, made of a tree and logs and so forth was in the emplacement of a real gun that had been located; it had its painted sandbags about it just the same, and it felt itself so entirely a part of the battery that whenever its companions fired, it burnt a flash and kicked up a dust. It was an excellent example of the great art of camouflage which this war has developed.

Division is now studying camouflage with a view to making definite recommendations to the Secretary of War. In the meantime the New York volunteer artists have been asked to submit technical details as to material and functions.

Abbott Thayer of Dublin, N. H., was the first person ever to take up the art of concealment when he began the study of the protective coloring of animals 25 years ago. He noted that such beasts as the zebra and okapi were parts of the landscape at a few yards distance and he evolved the principle that the breaking of outline was the destruction of visibility.

Little was thought of camouflage at the onset of the present big conflict. There were white kid gloves—fatal targets for German snipers—and waving plumes; the burnished cuirass and the pennoned lance. Then the two contending lines dug themselves in and locked horns. Concealment became everything—concealment from the aero with the telescopic eye; from the artillery observation station, binocular-eyed; from the practiced glance of the sharpshooter and the keen vision of the patrols. French artists in the ranks busied themselves; a new branch of the art military was born—camouflage.

Today it is highly developed. There are two branches, invisibility and imitation. A supply train may look like a row of cottages; that is imitation. A screen tops a great gun so that the green of the screen blends with the grass of the meadow; that is invisibility. And there is a third offshoot—the art of making compelling replicas of camps, guns, piles of supplies, trenches, ammunition depots and the like, which are not bonafide at all, but the aero man thinks they are and wastes his bombs and engry at attacking nothing worth while.

At midnight Emma McChesney, inured as she was to sleepers and all their horrors, found her lower eight unbearable. With the bravery of desperation she groped about for her cinder-strewn belongings, donned slippers and kimono, waited until the tortured porter's footsteps had squeaked their way to the far end of the car, then sped up the dim aisle toward the back platform. She wrenched open the door, felt the rush of air, drew in a long, grateful, smoke-steam-dust laden lungful of it, felt the breath of it on spine and thest, sneezed, realized that she would be the victim of a summer cold next day, and, knowing, cared not.

"Great, ain't it?" said a voice in the darkness. (Nay, reader. A woman's voice.)

Emma McChesney was of the nonscreaming type. But something inside of her suspended action for the fraction of a second. She peered into the darkness.

"'J' get scared?" inquired the voice. Its owner lurched forward from the corner in which she had been crouching, into the half-light cast by the vestibule night globe.

Even as men judge one another by a Masonic emblem, an Elk pin or the band of a cigar, so do women in sleeping cars weigh each other according to the rules of the Ancient Order of the Kimono. Seven seconds after Emma McChesney first beheld the negligee that stood revealed in the dim light she had its wearer neatly weighed, marked, listed, docketed and placed.

It was the kind of kimono that is associated with straw-colored hair and French-heeled shoes and over-fed dogs at the end of a leash. The Japanese are wrongly accused of having perpetrated it. In pattern it showed bright green flowers-that-never-were sprawling on a purple background. A diamond bar fastened it not too

I was in charge of the second "wave," or assault line. This is called the "mopping up" wave, because the business of the men composing it is thoroughly to bomb out a position crossed by the first wave, to capture or kill all of the enemy remaining and to put the trench in a condition to be defended against a counter attack by reversing the fire steps and throwing up parapets.

Our artillery had given the Germans such a battering and the curtain fire which our guns dropped just 30 to 40 vards ahead of us was so powerful that we lost comparatively few men going over -only those who were knocked down by shells which the Germans landed among us through our barrage. They never caught us with their machine-gun sweeping until we neared their trenches. Then a good many of our men began to drop, but we were in their front trench before they could cut us up anywhere near completely. Going over I was struck by shell fragments on the hand and leg, but the wounds were not severe enough to stop me. In fact, I did not know that I had been wounded until I felt blood running into my shoe. Then I discovered the cut in my leg, but saw that it was quite shallow and that no artery of importance had been damaged. So I went on.

I had the familiar feeling of nervousness and physical shrinking and nausea at the beginning of this fight, but, by the time we were half way across No Man's Land I had my nerve back. After I had been hit. I remember feeling relieved that I hadn't been hurt enough to keep me

At 6:10 a. m. on the morning of Nov. 18, a bitter, cold day, we "went over" to take Desire and also the Desire support trenches. We started from the left of our old position, and our advance was between Thiepbal and Poziers, opposite to Grandecourt.

There was the usual artillery preparation and careful organization for the attack. I was again in charge of the "mopping up" wave, numbering 200 men and consisting mostly of bombers. It may seem strange to you that a noncommissioned officer should have so important an assignment, but, sometimes, in this war, privates have been in charge of companies, numbering 50 men, and I know of a case where a Lance Corporal was talion. It happened, on this day, that while I was in charge of the second wave, I did not go over with them. At the last noment I was given a special duty by Maj. John Lewis, formerly managing editor of the Montreal Star, and one of the bravest soldiers I ever knew, as well as the best beloved man in our battalion. A messenger came to me from Maj. Lewis, just as I was overseeing a fair distribution of the rum ration and incidentally getting my own share. I went to him at once.
